A degree in African and African-American studies encourages students to follow their passions and interests by offering a broad selection of courses addressing history, culture, sociology, politics and psychology. Many people who earn degrees in this area go on to study law, business or medicine.

Program Description

The African and African American studies program at ASU has assembled a dynamic faculty engaged in investigating the riveting complexities of Africa. Trained in a variety of disciplines that include anthropology, health, history, journalism, literature, sociology, political science and women's studies, the faculty examine a wide array of critical issues facing African-descended peoples across the stages of life at various times and places in history. Students choose one of the following areas of concentration: African diaspora studies or African studies.
