Liberty, equality and justice are the basis of many legal systems. When moral questions arise in politics and law, students will be able to explore the answers philosophically. Combining courses of philosophy, law, politics and policy will prepare students to tackle these questions in the workforce and graduate degree programs.

Program Description

The BA degree program in philosophy with a concentration in morality, politics and law combines the basic analytical approaches of philosophy with an emphasis on the moral questions that arise in political theory and law. The foundations of our political and legal systems are moral values, such as individual liberty, equality and justice. These are contested values, open to different understandings of their nature and implications.

Students explore the nature of morality, political theory, legal theory and the interconnections between them. Students complete philosophy courses as well as courses from disciplines related to philosophy to enrich and enliven their understanding of the intersections of morality, politics and law. This degree program is of special interest to students planning to pursue postgraduate work in law, policy or politics.
