Religious Studies (Religion, Culture and Public Life), BA

LARELCPBA

Accelerated options for this program are not currently available to ASU Online students.

Look around and you will see religion everywhere. By studying a variety of materials, you gain an understanding of the role of religion in shaping the past, present and future of human societies and cultures, an understanding which will aid you in any field you decide to pursue.

Program Description

The BA in religious studies with a concentration in religion, culture and public life approaches religion as a mode of human culture, as constituted in intellect, language, emotion, practice, art and everyday life.

The program focuses on the role religions play in the formation of cultural identities, traditions, norms and memories, and it examines in particular the impact religions have on culturally specified ways people reason, communicate, socialize, work, entertain, dress, eat, live and die. Special consideration is given to the influence of religion on gender roles and sexual norms; the formation of images of the body and the moral assessment of medical practices; and the reflection and reproduction of religion in film, popular culture, and conventional, digital and social media.

The concentration addresses present-day interests and prepares students for jobs in a variety of professions, including education, journalism, media studies, gender studies, health care, politics, law, education, migration and international studies.

Students currently enrolled in the Bachelor of Arts in religious studies with a concentration in religion, culture and public life may not pursue a concurrent degree with the Bachelor of Arts in religious studies or the Bachelor of Arts in religious studies with a concentration in religion, politics and global affairs due to the high level of overlap in curriculum. Students should speak with their academic advisor for any further questions.
