International Letters and Cultures (Arabic Studies), BA

With around 420 million speakers around the world, rooted in influential and emerging economies, ancient history and modern politics, knowing Arabic goes beyond a competitive edge. With a bachelor's degree in Arabic studies, you have a pathway into a number fields, equipped with cultural intelligence and competency.

Program Description

The BA program in international letters and cultures with a concentration in Arabic studies provides critical and cultural diversity in advanced Arabic language and literature that enriches ASU students' undergraduate experience; helps them gain a broad knowledge and understanding of the culture, literature and traditions of the vast Arabic-speaking world; and prepares them for the job market. The Arabic studies concentration benefits students interested in academic research and careers in public and diplomatic service as well as in national security. This concentration complements existing degree programs in the School of International Letters and Culture and enhances studies in social science disciplines such as political science and global studies, and in humanities fields including anthropology, history, philosophy and religious studies.
