Laws (Global Legal Studies), LLM

A global perspective and cross-cultural skills are becoming increasingly important for those who want to be effective leaders in law and policy. You can apply what you have learned in international law to a range of jobs related to policymaking, business, criminal justice, economic development and human rights.

Program Description

Degree Awarded: LL.M. Laws (Global Legal Studies)
The LLM program allows one year of post-JD study tailored to the scholarly and practice interests of participating students.

The program draws on the unique focus of the center and the faculty's international and transnational legal expertise in global health, the environment, human rights, trade and emerging technologies. The program emphasizes transdisciplinary study and links rigorous legal training with the research and scholarship drawn from political science, policy studies, anthropology and sustainability.

Students can take a wide variety of courses on international topics, ranging from international environmental law to international human rights law to international institutions. These include business-related courses such as international contracts, international taxation, international commercial arbitration and international business transactions.

Students who participate in externships gain practical experience that makes them more competitive for jobs at home and abroad. ASU Law can place every eligible enrolled student into an externship at organizations in Arizona (https://law.asu.edu/about/locations/phoenix) or Washington, D.C., like the U.S. State Department, World Bank, International Rescue Committee, Department of Homeland Security and Human Rights First. ASU Law DC-based externship opportunities are available to view here: https://law.asu.edu/experiences/externships. The opportunity for students to network with international decision-makers, opinion leaders and top practitioners is further amplified through ASU’s large presence in Washington, D.C. (https://washingtondc.asu.edu/#why-is-asu-in-washington-dc).
Students can develop professionally by engaging with globally minded leaders in the legal, government and business communities. For instance, the Phoenix Committee on Foreign Relations hosts events and other forums for select students to engage with prominent leaders and practitioners on trending international issues.

Each year, the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law holds a workshop with the American Red Cross on international humanitarian law that brings students, members of the military and community leaders together to learn more about the principles governing armed conflict.

Degree Requirements

The program is designed to be completed in one academic year (nine months) on a full-time basis but may also be pursued on a part-time basis. A degree program candidate must complete 24 credit hours of coursework. A candidate may elect to write a master's degree portfolio paper or, instead, can elect to complete an applied project. Required coursework includes two of the following courses:

LAW 615 Public International Law (3)
LAW 691 Seminar: International Institutions (2)
LAW 709 International Human Rights (2-3)
LAW 768 International Business Transactions (2-4)

An international student whose initial law degree is not from a U.S. law school is required to take the following course:

LAW 596 Professional Legal Writing (2)

The remaining credit hours are generally obtained from the list of elective courses in international law.

Admission Requirements

Applicants must fulfill the requirements of both the Graduate College and the Sandra Day O'Connor College of Law.
Applicants are eligible to apply to the program if they have earned a Juris Doctor degree in the U.S. or a law degree at a foreign institution that would qualify the applicant to practice law or pursue license to practice in that country.

All applicants must submit:

1. completed LLM application form and application fee
2. official transcripts
3. resume, not exceeding three typed pages
4. statement of interest, not exceeding 1,250 words (double-spaced, typed pages)
5. two letters of recommendation
6. writing sample
7. proof of English proficiency

Additional Application Information

An applicant whose native language is not English must provide proof of English proficiency regardless of current residency. Applicants should see the College of Law website for acceptable TOEFL scores and additional information for foreign educated applicants.

Applicants are encouraged to apply electronically through https://www.lsac.org.

Transcripts and letters of recommendation or evaluations must be submitted through the Law School Admissions Council's Credential Assembly Service and are provided to the ASU College of Law by LSAC. Transcripts are required from all institutions attended, and transcripts showing that the bachelor's degree and law degree were conferred must be included.

Admission to the program is competitive. Selection is based on academic background and potential, diversity of experience and background, career experience and ambitions, strength of experience related to the program sought, space and resource limitations in the law school and other factors.

Potential applicants should see the program website for application deadlines.
