Program Description

Degree Awarded: MEd Secondary Education (Teacher Certification)
This program is for those who want to become certified to teach grades 6-12 in the public schools and already have a bachelor's degree in any field.

ASU's secondary education program builds strong connections between theory and practice through quality classroom instruction paired with extensive clinical experiences.

Students gain a strong foundation in teaching and content knowledge from experts in the field of education. Mary Lou Fulton Teachers College faculty actively engage in the educational research community and embed this vital knowledge throughout the program. This connection further empowers our students to engage in their own research through the culminating action research applied project.

A series of professional experiences or field placements are designed to assist students in developing a thorough understanding of teaching and learning as they apply knowledge from their coursework in varied school settings. Individualized guidance through the program's clinical framework provides students with the support they need to be successful in today's rapidly evolving educational environment.

The MEd program in secondary education with teacher certification offers two options for students to earn a master's degree and Arizona teacher certification: MAC and InMAC.

Master's and Arizona Certification (MAC) -- In this program, students take classes at an ASU campus two nights a week and are required to do a field internship one day per week. During the last semester of the program, students complete a full-time teaching residency in their content area.

Induction, Master's and Arizona Certification (InMAC) -- This program provides an alternative pathway to teacher certification for full-time teachers on a teaching intern certificate. To qualify, individuals must secure a full-time teaching position. The InMAC program also features a partnership with Teach For America.
Participants take classes one night per week. The InMAC program supports individuals teaching in elementary, secondary and special education classrooms through coursework and supervised professional experiences.
